INFORMED CONSENT FOR HYFRECTOR 2000 FORM

A Hyfrecator is a cautery heated by an electric current allowing the cauterization of tissue. It is a low-powered medical apparatus used in electrosurgery on conscious patients. It works by emitting low-power high-frequency high-voltage AC electrical pulses, via an electrode mounted on a handpiece, directly to the affected area of the body. A continuous electrical spark discharge may be drawn between probe and tissue. The Hyfrecator is a safe, effective, and economical treatment option for the clinical removal of telangiectasias (spider veins), skin tags, blood moles, milia, broken capillaries and other vascular lesions found on the face and upper body. It is a quick and simple treatment that should not cause scarring or hyper-pigmentation. There is minimal discomfort and healing time is usually less than a week.

CONTRAINDICATIONS

- Anatomical locations of concern include sites near the eye and any site/mass with a narrow stalk or base
- Application of current at sites with a narrow stalk or base can cause a phenomenon called “channeling,” in which the current is concentrated as it passes through the narrowed region, creating the potential for tissue damage at the base.
- While not an absolute contraindication to the use of electrosurgery, IEDs such as cardiac and gastric pacemakers, implantable cardioverter defibrillators (ICDs), cochlear implants, and deep brain, nerve, spinal cord or bone stimulators create unique risks. Patients with these devices require thorough preprocedural evaluation and may require intraoperative monitoring and post procedure device assessment.
